DISCUSS COUNTY WATER PROBLEM

The regular meeting of the Fire Commissioners and the firemen was held at the City Hall last Monday evening.

Several members of the San Mateo County Water District committee were present to take up the question of the needs of a county distributing system so that our county may get its proportion of the Hetch Hetchy water, and guard against a future shortage, which is inevitable under the rapid growth of the peninsula, both from a standpoint of population and industries. So this was made a special order of business.

E. B. Hinman, of Redwood City, was the first speaker. He said:

At this moment, San Mateo county is confronted with the most important problem of its existence, that is the acquisition of an adequate water supply. The very future of our county is dependent upon the immediate solution of this problem.

This matter of our water supply is no new study. As early as 1912, Profesosr Charles D. Marx of Stanford University submitted an engineering study on that subject. In this able report, Professor Marx pointed out the necessity of a metropolitan water district in this region.

More recently, a group of citizens of San Mateo county undertook to investigate present water supply conditions through the study of a report, dated July 9, 1929, prepared by our local engineers, a copy of which report was published in full by all of the leading county newspapers.

The conclusions contained in that report, supported by an exhaustive study of the facts, are in brief:

1. Local sources of water supply are inadequate and have been practically exhausted.
2. Our future water supply must come from the Hetch Hetchy-Spring Valley system.
3. A general system of distribution must be provided, so that we may avail ourselves of this supply.
4. The best method is the formation of a San Mateo county water district.

An abundant supply of pure water is absolutely essential to the future of the county. Therefore, we view with alarm the figures set forth in detail in our engineer's report. Of our total daily consumption of 13.9 million gallons, we are now drawing on the Spring Valley system daily for 2.4 million gallons. This daily draft upon that system is even now causing pressing mechanical difficulties, which demand considerable ingenuity to surmount.

To avoid this impending crisis in our water supply and to avail ourselves properly of the supply of the Hetch Hetchy-Spring Valley water and to obviate these difficulties of distribution, it is essential that an agency be organized to take this water from its source, in so far as we are concerned, and distribute it economically throughout our Bayside area, both to the incorporated cities and the unincorporated areas on this side of our coast watershed. That is the function of the proposed San Mateo county water district.

Bear in mind that within the proposed boundaries of this district, that there are some thirty or more local distributing systems, each with its own particular problem, immediate or remote, of increasing its production of water as new consumers create the demand or the source of the present supply shrinks. Then picture, if you will, two large mains running parallel north and south through the county, one along your foothills serving the residential area, and another along the Bayshore highway serving the industrial and business area; both mains served through a single connection with the Crystal Springs reservoir and joined together by such lateral mains as the service to all parts of the area demands.

The San Mateo county water district is not designed to take over and operate the seperate agencies, either private or municipal, which now act as the retailers of water in the county. Rather is its purpose to solve their problem of obtaining an abundant supply of pure water, by making such a supply available for their use through this main distribution system.

Our engineers report that the cost of such a distribution system will be from four to five million dollars, the cost to be extended over a seven to ten year period; that the system could be constructed in units, which could be put in service as units and placed upon an income basis immediately upon completion, so that the annual charges on a greater part of the construction can be satisfied from the income accruing from the operation.

That is the story in a nutshell.

This fundamental principle is irrefutable: Water is an element essential to life, human, animal or vegetable. We are at present facing a

"JOSHUA'S CHOICE," THEME AT PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

Life is just one choice after another. Success comes from successful choices. Failure follows a mistaken choice. You can not sidestep making a choice. Rev. J. R. Stevenson will have some things to say about the need of a rigid backbone in making the choices of life, at the Grace Presbyterian church next Sunday. A program of music has been arranged by Miss Madie Irons as a result of the pastor giving the charge of the musical program into the hands of the young people of the church. The sermon commences at 8 p. m.

CHRISTOPHER COLUMBUS

Selected by Lillian G. Landini

Christopher Columbus was an eminent navigator, born near Genoa, Italy, in 1446; died in Spain, May 20, 1506. He became a sailor at the early age of 14 years. His father was woolcomber and sent him to Pavia to secure and education, where he developed a taste for astronomy and geography. He settled in Lisbon in 1470 and married the daughter of an Italian named Palestrello. Obtaining some charts and assistance from his father-in-law, he studied and constructed many maps.

His first voyages were to the Azores, the Canaries and the coast of Guinea. In 1482 he laid his plan before John II, of Portugal, with the view of securing assistance and making an extended voyage of discovery, but was refused after the latter had submitted the plans to a body of nautical and scientific men. He next proceeded to Genoa for the same purpose, and, again failing, sailed for Spain, where he received assistance after laboring seven years at the court of Ferdinand and Isabella. The conditions requested by Columbus were that he should be appointed governor-general and viceroy over the lands that he might discover, with an allowance of one-tenth of the products.

He set sail on August 3, 1492, with 120 men and three small vessels, called the Santa Marie, Pinta, and Nina. The voyager started from Pavlos, took a westerly course, and reached land in the Bahama group on October 12, 1492. The land discovered is thought to have been Watling's or Samana Island. He next discovered Cuba and Hayti, planted colonies on them, and returned home in March, 1493. He made a second voyage the following autumn, taking with him a larger expedition, this being possible because of much interest manifested by the people of the Old World. He remained in the West Indies until 1496.

His third voyage was made in 1498, when he discovered the mainland of South America at the mouth of the Orinoco, thinking he had found a continent, but supposing himself to be on the easter coast of Asia.

His fourth voyage extended from 1502 to 1504, when he explored the coast of Central America.

His voyages were attended with more or less dissatisfaction and insubordination of his sailors. He was imprisoned on the third voyage by his enemies and sent in chains to Spain, but was soon released. He survived Queen Isabella a short time, dying at Valladolid. At his request his remains were taken to San Domingo, but when Hispaniola came into possession of the French, they were removed, in 1796, to the cathedral of Havana in Cuba. When Spain lost Cuba in 1898, the remains were removed to Spain.

Carlyle, in a famous passage, salutes him across the centuries: "Brave sea-captain, Norse sea-king, Columbus, my hero, Royalist sea-king of all."

LARGE FAMILIES? YES, SIR!

Competition is keen at Calvary Baptist Mission. Next Sunday is the second week of the Loyalty Crusade, and is designated at "Family Day." Calvary Mission is fortunate in having a number of large families, but just which one will have the most members present remains to be seen. A prize will be given to the family having the greatest number present. Sunday night is set aside as "Men's Night." Can the men have more present than the women? We shall see. A prize will also be given to the oldest man and woman present. Special songs and beautiful music will be features of both services.

MERCHANTS LOSE IN CLOSE CONTEST

The Daly City Merchants' baseball team lost a 4 to 3 decision to the Municipal Railway nine last Sunday on the Seventh and Harrison streets diamond.

Listen, a speed ball artist, was on the mound for the railroad men. He whiffed fifteen merchants, allowed eleven hits and issued two walks.

Dick Randall, the Marchants' capable chucker, pitched a fair game, but received poor support from his teammates. His record for the day was eight hits, one base on balls, five strikeouts and not an earned run was charged against him.

The winners started off by scoring two runs in the initial frame. Randall struck out the first three men, but Strand did not handle Moyle's third strike and he was safe at first base. Two doubles in succession drove across the two runs.

The next score of the game was chalked up in the fifth inning. A pair of costly boots by Rettig, the Merchants' shortstop, put men on first and second base. They both crossed the plate when the following man up doubled.

The boys from Daly City went scoreless for seven innings, and obtained only five hits during that time, not more than one in any inning. But they put across one run in the eighth and two in the ninth.

During the eighth inning the play that really won the game was staged. Mike Reardon came to bat with the bases loaded and one man out. He connected with one of Listen's fast ones and clouted what looked like a sure home run, only to see the left fielder snare the ball after a long chase. A double play was the result.

BOARD ENDORSES WATER DISTRICT

Unanimous endorsement of the proposed formation of a San Mateo county water district was made by the board of supervisors of San Mateo county at the regular meeting in Redwood City last Monday.

Edward T. Harrison of Redwood City, chairman of the citizens committee formed to take steps toward formation of the water district, presented the matter to the board.

The next step will be too form the district and submit the matter to the people to vote on a bond issue.

The proposed project will cost between four and five million dollars and it will take from seven to ten years to complete construction of water mains to bring the water from the Hetch Hetchy Spring Valley system.

The Burlingame Woman's club sent a communication to the board, asking that it take action similar to that taken in San Francisco relative to prohibiting signboards along the highways in the county. As San Francisco's goverment is different from the form followed in this county, it was pointed out that the board could do nothing in the matter. The club will be informed that the board heartily approves of the removal of all signs along roadways, however.

A letter from Supervisor Andrew J. Gallagher of San Francisco explained the status of joint highway district No. 9, saying that the directors of the district were waiting for the outcome of a case in the state supreme court regarding validity of bonds for road work in Alameda county, before going ahead with construction of the coastside scenic highway.

Dr. Creeley of Half Moon Bay was appointed county meat inspector, at a salary of $100 per month and $20 per month for gasoline.

The board will instruct County Purchasing Agent E. H. Werder to fortify the windows and the back porch at the juvinile detention home in Redwood City, to prevent children from escaping from there.

In response to a letter from the Peninsula Garden association requesting that representatives be sent to the next meting of the board to discuss the forthcoming fall flower show, the board instructed County Clerk Elizabeth M. Kneese to tell members of the club that the board would be delighted to have them appear at the next meeting.

A resolution was passed permitting foreclosure suits to be brought against the county to settle the matter of delinquencies for street improvement bonds in North Palo Alto and Visitacion Valley.

Maps of Sunset Highlands, San Carlos subdivision, and Newbridge Park No. 4, Atherton subdivision, were accepted.

County Surveyor George Kneese was instructed to send a county map to the Department of Commerce, which is making resurvey of the coast line for its marine chart.

In a letter, the State Agricultural Society thanked the county for its co-operation at the recent state fair.

The applications of six needy blind in the county for state aid were accepted.

SOME ODDS AND ENDS OF THE WEEK'S NEWS

After an unsuccessful attempt to escape San Bruno police by jumping onto the rear end of a moving truck, John Moore a cook of San Francisco, was booked at the county jail in Redwood City on a grand theft charge.

A broken leg and two broken arms was the baseball game admission price paid by Arthur Gale, aged 13, of Stockton, last Sunday. He climbed a tree to look over the fence and see the Seals and Solons play. A limb broke at an exciting moment of play and the lad fell, breaking both forearms and a leg.

Miss Pansy Jewett Abbott, county superintendent of schools, was re-elected secretary-treasurer of the California County Superintendents' association at the close of the state educators' meet held in Pasadena last week. Many of San Mateo county's leading educators attended the convention.

Aladino Bertolucci of Half Moon Bay is serving a six months' term in the county jail in Redwood City, having been given a jail term and fined $500 by Federal Judge Frank F. Norcross of San Francisco on a charge of violating the national prohibition act.

The Oroville citrus district will ship 200 cars of oranges this season, it is estimated by C. H. Kinsley county agricultural commissioner. Over 50 per cent of a normal crop will be harvested.

USE OF ILLEGAL HEADLIGHTS WILL BRING YOU CITATION

"Check your headlights!"

This is the warning broadcast to motorists following the announcement that citations will be issued to drivers whose headlights fail to comply with the law by October 15.

Beginning October 15, officers of the California highway patrol have been instructed by Superintendent Eugene Biscailuz to start issuing citations of arrest to all motorists found driving cars in violation of the headlight provisions of the state law.

Other enforcement officers throughout the state acting in co-operation with the California highway patrol, and in accordance with the proclamation of the governor and mayors of some sixty-five cities, will also begin issuing citations to curb the blinding headlight evil.

Due notice of the intention of the authorities to tighten up on enforcement of the provisions of the law relating to proper adjustment of headlights, has been given through the press, radio broadcasts, service clubs, and otherwise, by the safety committee. Those who have so far failed to see that their lights are correctly adjusted have until October 15 only to do so. After that the law will take its course whenever a violation is discovered, the announcement states.

ZEPPELIN MEALS COOKED IN ALL-ELECTRIC KITCHEN

Passengers on the epochal round-the-world flight of the Graf Zeppelin were loud in their praise of the meals en route. The tiny kitchen where the tasty menus were prepared is electrically equipped. The principal appliance is an electric stove, and the equipment also includes many of the smaller labor-saving devices common to modern resturant kitchens.

So far the Farm Board has made no advances to relieve the sowers of wild oats.

FISH AND GAME NOTES

By J. H. NEUSTADT

The magic word "Ducks" is on all wild fowl hunter's lips, with the opening of the duck hunting season.

Duck hunters who are soprtsmen will heed an old-timer's creed.

I will never shoot a duck sitting among the decoys.

I will not pot shot nor stand for it in my party.

I will measure my success not only by the number I get but by leaving no cripples behind.

I will shoot to kill and not out of range to cripple.

I will not "piece out" the other fellow's kill; the legal limit applies to each man and not to each party.

If I can't kill my own game, I will not permit anyone else to do it for me.

I want to be a sportsman, not a pot shooter, nor meat hunter.

The County Fish and Game Association invites every true sportsman to join and assist in the good work, and it also invites every poacher and game law vioaltor to come in also, knowing that by example and association they too will become true sportsmen.

The regular monthly meeting of the San Mateo County Fish and Game Protective Association was held in Legion Hall, on Tuesday, September 24.

The meeting was exceptional in interest and attendance, as delegates were present from San Francisco, Alameda, Contra Costa and San Mateo, which counties constitute Region No. 7.

The honor of choosing a Regional president was offered to San Mateo county, and Mr. A. McSweeney, of Redwood City, was elected to that office by acclamation.

The club will be very active during the coming months, as the program embraces competition for silver cups and other valuable prizes in several classes, regular semi-monthly shoots at the trap grounds near the Hayward bridge approach, and the turkey shoots will soon be organized.

A number of new members were initiated and the club is rapidly growing in numbers.

TRIPLE ATTRACTION BILL AT DALY CITY THEATRE

Reginald Denny in "Clear the Decks," a big nautical comedy special, will be the top liner of a triple attraction at the Daly City Theatre tomorrow. Buzz Barton in "The Young Whirlwind," and episode three of the serial thriller "Fighting for Fame," will be on the same bill. There will be free candy for the kiddies at the matinee.

For Sunday, Snooky White will offer a big surprise attraction on the stage with his musical players, and the screen attraction will be Sally O'Neil, Jean Hersholt and Malcolm McGregor in "The Girl on the Barge." Episode four of the serial "Fighting for Fame" will also be shown.

Monday night is silvernite and the screen attraction will be "Girls Gone Wild," with Nick Stuart and Sue Carroll in the leading roles.

For Tuesday, Clara Bow and Frederick March will be seen in "The Wild Party," while for Wednesday there will be a big two feature showing of Harry Carey in "Burning Bridges" and Helen Twelvetrees in "Blue Skies."

Phyllis Haver with Alan Hale and Fred Kohler will hold the Thursday spot in "Sal of Singapore," while for Friday Sam and his Country Store, together with Eddie Quillan, Theodore Roberts and Alberta Vaughn in "Noisy Neighbors," a big all fun show.

W. C. T. U. LEADER PLANS A VISIT TO THE COAST

Mrs. Beatrice E. Coggins, of San Francisco, state corresponding secretary of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of California, north, has just received word from Mrs. Ella A. Boole, of Brooklyn, N. Y., national president of the organization, that she has started on her trip which will take her to eight W. C. T. U. state conventions. She will reach San Francisco on October 17, where she will be the honor guest of the convention of W. C. T. U. of California north in San Francisco, October 15-18. Beside being national president, Mrs. Boole is editor of the national organ of the W. C. T. U., the "Union Signal," which is published in Evanston, Ill. Each state organization also publishes a state paper.

Folks just can't get worked up over the tariff with a world's series and a football season on their minds.

LOCOMOTIVE IS OPERATED BY SPOKEN COMMAND

Successful experiments in New York with a miniature electric locomotive that runs in response to spoken words have given experts a vision of a householder operating his furnace by vocal orders from his bedside. On the locomotive a transmitter carries spoken orders to a selector that operates the controls. Three syllables send it forward, two start it backward and one brings it to a stop.

Los Angeles Boy Needed Help

Leroy Young, 1116 Georgia St., Los Angeles, is a "regular fellow," active in sports, and at the top in his classes at school. To look at him now, you'd think he never had a day's sickness but his mother says: "When Leroy was just a little fellow, we found his stomach and bowels were weak. He kept suffering from constipation. Nothing he ate agreed with him. He was fretful, feverish and puny.

"When we started giving him California Fig Syrup his condition improved quickly. His constipation and biliousness stopped and he has had no more trouble of that kind. I have since used California Fig Syrup with him for colds and upset spells. He likes it because it tastes so good and I like it because it helps him so wonderfully!"

California Fig Syrup has been the trusted standby of mothers for over 50 years. Leading physicians recommend it. It is purely vegetable and works with Nature to regulate, tone and strengthen the stomach and bowels of children so they get full nourishment from their food and waste is eliminated in a normal way.

Four million bottles used a year shows how mothers depend on it. Always look for the word "California" on the carton to be sure of getting the genuine.

Case of Jaundice

Judge Harper Harb of Little Rock, who recently condemned for blasphemy President Charles Smith of the American Association for the Advancement of Atheism, said at a luncheon the other day:

"It's bad enough to be an atheist, but to go about the country trying to rob others of their faith shows a spirit jaundiced in the extreme.

"Such a spirit is like that which prevailed in the schoolroom. The schoolmaster said to a boy:

"'A synonym for "friends," Jones.'

"'Money, sir,' Jones answered.

"'Quite right, Jones,' said the schoolmaster."

ONE PRESCRIPTION MADE FAMILY DOCTOR FAMOUS

Seldom has any single act been of greater benefit to mankind than that of Dr. Caldwell in 1885, when he wrote the prescription which has carried his fame to the four corners of the earth.

Over and over, Dr. Caldwell wrote the prescription as he found men, women and children suffering from those common symptoms of constipation, such as coated tongue, bad breath, headaches, gas, nausea, biliousness, no energy, lack of appetite, and similar things.

Demand for this prescription grew so fast, because of the pleasant, quick way it relieved such symptoms of constipation, that by 1888 Dr. Caldwell was forced to have it put up ready for use. Today, Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, as it is called, is always ready at any drugstore.

Acidity

The common cause of digestive difficulties is excess acid. Soda cannot alter this condition, and it burns the stomach. Something that will neutralize the acidity is the sensible thing to take. That is why physicians tell the public to use Phillips Milk of Magnesia.

One spoonful of this delightful preparation can neutralize many times its volume in acid. It acts instantly; relief is quick, and very apparent. All gas is dispelled; all sourness is soon gone; the whole system is sweetened. Do try this perfect anti-acid, and remember it is just as good for children, too, and pleasant for them to take.

Any drug store has the genuine, prescriptional product.

Noisy Pig Feeders Bother Man

Noisy mechanical pig feeders as an effect on health were discussed in a recent session of the British Medical association in Manchester, England. Dr. Grace Griffith said the menace should be abolished. A mechanical pig feeder, she said, is fitted with a lid which the pig raises when it wants to eat and allows to bang down when the porker withdraws his nose. The uncertainty of not knowing when the next pig was going to eat so got on the nerves of one man at West Suffolk that he had to quit the neighborhood, the doctor stated.

COULD NOT SLEEP NIGHTS

Helped By Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Fairhaven, Mass.—"I am taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound during the Change of Life and I think it is a wonderful tonic. When I feel nervous and run-down my husband gets me a bottle right away. It is a great help to me and I think that if other people would only take it when they feel all run-down and take it as the directions say, they would find it a great benefit. My worst symptoms were nervousness and tired feelings. I could not sleep nights and I did not care about my work. I was so nervous I would cry if anyone looked at me."—Mrs. Ada Besse, 196 Washington Street, Fairhaven, Mass.

Professor Samuel C. May of the University of California, Berkeley, will organize them. Three state sleuths, authorized as part of the division of crminal identification by the last Legislature, will be named within a short time.

The Continental-Marland gusher on the north dome of the Kettleman Hills is expected to produce 10,000 barrels of oil daily when a sufficient number of gas traps have been installed. So far three traps rave been installed, saving close to 6800 barrels of oil daily. The Milham discovery well seemed to be temporarily affected with the bringing in of the Continental gusher, dropping to 2600 barrels and losing in pressure.

According to figures presented by Leon J. Richardson, director of the University of California extension division, nearly 500,000 adults in the state are "learning while earning." These half million people, he says, are studying in commercial correspondence schools, university extension courses, night schools, university and teacher college summer sessions, clubs and forums.

Rolling in wealth, gaining at a rate of $2,000,000,000 yearly, California, it was revealed is ten times a billionaire in taxable wealth. Registering new opulence in every field of industry, the state gained nearly 22 per cent in assessed valuatoin in the last twelve months, auditors of its fifty-eight counties announced, reporting to the State Board of Equalization. Rural property is booming and urban holdings show astounding gains in worth, the board announced, analyzing the reports showing taxable values of $9,890,992,962, a gain of 21.73 per cent as compared with $8,125,497,579 in 1928.

The twenty-four hour school, center of tumult in the 1929 legislative session, is slated for use in California, Vierling Kersey, state superintendent of public instruction, announced. Requests from various parts of the state for a plan of admission will be dealt with by the State Board of Education. Designated for detention and instruction of pre-delinquent children, the twenty-four hour school was sponsored by Assemblywoman Eleanor Miller of Pasadena. Governor Young signed the bill after a determined post-legislative campaign against it, protestants charging that innocent children could be virtually "railroaded" into jail under its provisions, merely on suspicion that they might "go wrong."

Incorporation of the San Francisco Bay Point Manufacturing District Limited, formed to promote industrial growth in the San Francisco area, was announced. Authorized to issue 20.000 shares without par value, the corporation has as directors Joseph L. Zook, M. H. Baker, Frank E. Carroll and George E. Moritz of San Francisco.

The Chico board of education has voted to pay express charges on two airplane motors which will be loaned to the Chico High School by the engineering department of Wright Field, the U. S. Army aerial testing grounds.

CARRIER'S FAME MOST ENDURING

That Style of Offense Brings Red Grange to Front.

More grid players have gained fame through ability to carry the ball off tackle and around end than any other form of attack. Once in a while a kicker, a pass receiver, a passer will be a team's great star, but the carrier's fame is the most enduring. This style of offense brought Red Grange into the limelight.

The wide end sweeps and the cut back plays with excellent blocking by linesmen and leading backs made Grange famous. The same was true of Paddy Driscoll when he wore the purple colors of Northwestern. Oliphant, of Purdue, who afterward went to the Army, was given excellent support by his line, and thus made his reputation.

However, there must be a variation of attack. A pass, especially if used from the running formation, makes the ground gaining easier off tackle and around end. The line plunge, with a fake thrust off tackle, is the more effective if tackle plays have been gaining.

Quarterbacks seek to find the weak spot in opponents' defense. A game may be won by the use of five plays instead of the fifty or sixty which may compose the offensive repertoire.

As the modern game is played any back may be shifted to a ball carrying position. In this manner ball carriers may be rested. Ends may be brought back if they are adept at running.

Congress may be asked to intervene in the squabble between the Army and Navy departments over the resumption of athletic relations. Congressman Hamilton Fish, New York, called on President Hoover and suggested that the games be resumed. The famous one-time Harvard varsity grid player, talking after the interview, said:

"I suggested that the secretaries of war and navy, the superintendents of the two academies and the athletic directors should call a conference in an effort to remove the differences that caused a break in relations."

Miller Huggins, famed manager of the New York Yankees, who passed on the other day, was at one time the leader of the St. Louis Cardinals and as such had a long and serious debate with Bob Connery, St. Louis scout, over giving $500 for the purchase of a rookie. Connery finally won and Rogers Hornsby became the property of the St. Louis team.

Ohio State's passing for the coming season will be handled by McConnell and Holman, practice at Stadium field indicated. Arden McConnell, a third-year man, has come up from the ranks in the last two weeks of pre-season work and has what seems to be a regular halfback position.

Mickey Walker, middleweight boxing champion, will meet Ace Hudkins, of Nebraska, in a ten-round title bout at Los Angeles on October 29.

Chuck Wiggins, Indianapolis heavyweight boxer, was sentenced to serve 60 days in jail and was fined $500 and costs upon his plea of guilty on nine charges growing out of a recent automobile accident.

One of the great races in which the late Sam Hildredth trained the winner, was the International, in which Zev defeated the English Derby winner, Papyrus. Hildredth showed a fine spirit in this race by entertaining Ben Jarvis, trainer of the English horse in his box.

Bobby Jones' recent exhibition at the San Francisco Golf club netted the Shrine Hospital for Crippled Children close to $6,000. Jones says Doctor Willing of Portland, Ore., wants him to go fishing in Oregon next year and also that the Japanese government has invited him to play exhibition matches in Japan.

Ralph Hewitt, a sophomore at Columbia, is looked upon as the best backfield prospect since the days of Walter Koppisch.

Trojans' Hard Task

Captained by Nate Barrager, the University of Southern California turns out its famous Trojans to face one of the most difficult football seasons in its history, during which its three biggest games are all played during a period of four weeks. The Trojans meet Stanford at Palo Alto, October 26; California at Los Angeles, November 2, and Notre Dame at Chicago, November 16.

To Identify Genuine Aspirin

THE increasing use of Bayer Aspirin every year is proof that it has no ill effects. It is the accepted antidote for pain. It always helps; it never harms. Quick relief when you've a headache, or cold; or are suffering from neuralgia or neuritis. Rheumatic pains yield, too, if you'll only give these tablets a chance. But you want genuine Aspirin, so look for the Bayer Cross on every tablet. The box always bears the name Bayer and the word "genuine" printed in red. Proven directions inside.

Aspirin is the trade mark Monoaceticacidester of Salicylicacid

Schoolgirl learns simple health measure

WITH all the talk there is nowadays about the independence of the sub-deb generation, your reporter got a great kick out of hearing a grandmother describe how her granddaughter was following a good old tried and true method of improving her general health.

"My granddaughter, Margaret," says Mrs. Zell of 6231 Catherine Street, Philadelphia, "read about Nujol, was interested in it, so sent for a sample." It seems she has been taking a tablespoon of Nujol once a day since and expects to continue this treatment. Already she has found an improvement in her general health, her system functioning normally where other remedies had failed.

That's one of the best things about Nujol. It is just as harmless for young girls, or babies even, as it is for adults. For Nujol contains no medicines or drugs. It can't upset you because it works so easily and regularly, in a normal fashion.

Nujol was perfected by the Nujol Laboratories, 2 Park Avenue, New York City. It can be bought anywhere for about the price of a ticket to a good movie. Get a bottle of Nujol today and try it, won't you? In sealed packages.

Babies will cry, often for no apparent reason. You may not know what's wrong, but you can always give Castoria. This soon has your little one comforted; if not, you should call a doctor. Don't experiment with medicines intended for the stronger systems of adults! Most of those little upsets are soon soothed away by a little of this pleasant-tasting, gentle-acting children's remedy that children like.

It may be the stomach, or may be the little bowels. Or in the case of older children, a sluggish, constipated condition. Castoria is still the thing to give. It is almost certain to clear up any minor ailment, and could by no possibility do the youngest child the slightest harm. So it's the first thing to think of when a child has a coated tongue; won't play, can't sleep, is fretful or out of sorts. Get the genuine; it always has Chas. H. Fletcher's signature on the package.

ARE WE LAWLESS?

We hear a lot about lawlessness in America, and it is true that we are lawless in one sense of the word. That is, there is more disregard of the law in this country, perhaps, than in any other on the globe.

However, if we define lawless to mean being without laws, we are certainly anything else but. We live under many thousands of laws and ordinances, most of which the average citizen never heard of. A recent statement by T. R. Preston, former president of the American Bankers' Association, will illustrate this. He said:

"It would take a man, working eight hours a day, seven years to read all the laws enacted last year, and yet ignorance of the law is no excuse. Courts are so congested that the district attorney of New York estimates that if every defendant should demand a jury trial, the calendars would be 500 years behind in four years. Americans will go to war and give their life's blood for liberty, and then turn around and enact laws depriving themselves of all liberty."

To which we may only add: "Ain't it the truth?"

A NATIONAL NUISANCE

Quite a lot of crusading has been done with a view to doing away with the barricades of billboards which mar the beauty of our natural scenery, but in spite of some progress made here and there, the billboard is still the outsanding national nuisance.

If this nuisance is ever to be effectively abated it must be done through convincing advertisers that their part in perpetuating it is bad business for them. Appeals to sentiment and love of the beautiful are generally futile.

State, county and city authorities can aid in the movement very materially, however, but it is often difficult to spur them to action. A recent example of commendable activity in the fight against ugliness is seen in Georgia, where the county commissioners of Fulton county, in which Atlanta is situated, have ordered the removal of all signs and billboards along the highways under their jurisdiction. The member who sponsored this measure said:

"There is a proper place for everything, including advertising. Our highways are designed to give tourists and Atlanta motorists the most beautiful scenery possible, but that scenery is ruined by the ever-increasing number of billboards and signs."

This is true of every county in America where the encroachments of the "outdoor advertiser" have been permitted to have unrestricted sway. The foolishness of it all cuts like a two-edged sword. Billboards in locations which render them offensive are irritating to the public, without benefit to the concerns which pay for them with the mistaken idea that they are building business and good will.

AMERICAN GOODS BEST

That American inventive genius and manufacturing skill are gaining ever wider recognition is evidenced by the brisk demand which has been created in Europe for superior electrical household appliances made in the United States, in spite of their higher cost as compared with the output of European factories.

One striking illustration of successful competition by American-made equipment is seen in increasing exports to Germany, where a marked rise in the purchasing power of the average family has been experienced of late. According to a report recently made to the Department of Commerce by Silas H. Altorfer, maker of ABC washers, his company alone has appointed twelve leading German jobbers as distributors of its products within a few months, while an expansion of foreign trade is likewise noted by manufacturers in other lines.

American household equipment has also gained high favor among the women of Poland, Rumania, Austria, Czechoslovakia and other countries of Central Europe, which are gradually recovering from the disastrous effects of the World war.

With the further rehabilitation of those countries in prospect, it is reasonable to expect a steady growth in their demand for high class American-made goods, which add materially to our exports and effect a corresponding increase in our factory pay-rolls.

DA VINCI'S WHEELBARROW

Leonardo da Vinci, born in 1452, is considered by many to have been the most universal genius the world has ever produced. His activities embraced all the fields of art and science in his day.

While he is best known as the painter of Mona Lisa and The Last Supper, he was also accomplished beyond his contemporaries as a sculptor, musician, astronomer, military engineer, botanist, anatomist, and geologist.

But great as were his contributions to art an science, the most lasting benefits which he conferred upon mankind were probably in the line of mechanical invention, although many of his conceptions were not developed practically until centuries later. It is said he invented a flying machine which would have been a success with a modern motor, for which the world had to wait another 400 years.

One of his inventions was the wheelbarrow, which, simple as it appears to us, has been one of the greatest labor-savers ever devised through the application of pure mechanics. It is strange to us that so many centuries elapsed between the invention of the wheel and that of the wheelbarrow.

That da Vinci was the first to hit upon this humble but most useful means of transportation is added proof of his genius.

AN EMPTY BOTTLE

When the cornerstone of the Robertson county court house at Springfield, Tennessee, was opened a few days ago, due to a remodeling of the structure, many articles deposited in it a half century ago were brought to light.

One of the items known to have been placed therein was a bottle of whisky, and onlookers at the opening of the cornerstone may have had hopes of sampling the famous product. But if so, they were doomed to disappointment. The bottle was found, but it was empty, the contents having presumably disappeared by evaporation.

Many other interesting relics were found in the stone, including newspapers, minutes of official proceedings, lists of fraternal society members, a history of the old Ku Klux Klan, a bank statement and other documents. There was also a coin which is now 191 years old, one $100 bill and two $20 bills.

The bills were no more valuable than the empty bottle, however, as they were Confederate currency.

THE SMITHS PREDOMINATE

In New York it's the Smiths and the Cohens, but in Boston it's the Smiths and Sullivans. Boston's new telephone directory lists more Smiths than any other name, but they are closely pressed by the Sullivans, who occupy eight and one-half pages as compared with nine pages devoted to the Smiths.

Another proof that war is what Sherman said it was is seen in what has happened to General Chung-chang of China. After being defeated and exiled he had to reduce the number of women in his harem from forty to two.

SIDELIGHTS

The usually alert magazine Time was recently inveigled into printing a communication signed "R. E. Voohnmad." Which being spelled backward forms an insulting reference to the President of the United States.

One of Edison's prodigies doesn't think so much of the famous examination in which he was rated high. Charles H. Brunissen of Connecticut, who stood second in the contest, says he considers the questions asked "senseless and idiotic." As to some of the questions, at least, few will disagree with him.

Keeping up with the Jonses: Bobby Jones, the golfer, lost out in the amateur championship tournament at Pebble Beach, California. Bobby Jones, a turtle, won first prize of $6,500 in the annual 101 Ranch turtle derby at Poca City, Oklahoma, by crawling 75 feet in one minute 19 seconds.

Even the most prosaic employment is sometimes beset with danger. A negro woman hanging out clothes in her back yard near the Washington baseball park was struck by a ball batted over the fence by "Goose" Goslin of the Senators.

Henry Ford turns down the suggestion that he make another bid for Muscle Shoals. But maybe some day he will buy it and add it to his Dearborn museum of historical relics.

Among endurance records that of a little hen at the Oklahoma A. and M. College is worthy of mention. She is 19 years old, has laid 1,100 eggs and has "served" under seven presidents of the college, five deans, six extension directors and three poultry department heads.

There are now 159 destroyers laid up out of commission and the Navy Department will retire many more from service soon, to avoid making repairs. Warships become oboslete in about ten years, and if there is no war in the meantime their expense is a total loss. But there would be a greater loss if war occurred.

THE "ELEVEN YEAR AFTER" CELEBRATION NOVEMBER 20

All local posts and auxiliaries of the Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States and their auxiliaries are co-operating to make the "Eleven Years After" celebration of the organization the greatest success ever staged. The affair is to be held in Scottish Rite Auditorium, Sutter and Van Ness avenue, San Francisco, on Saturday night, November 2, and distinguished veteran leaders, army, navy and marine corps officers will be present, as well as patients from the Letterman, Marine and Palo Alto hospitals.

Rooters for the big army and navy football game from the ranks of local veterans, from the army, navy and marine corps are expected to turn out en masse for the big V. F. W. affair which has become an institution in San Francisco. In addition, representation from Colonel J. J. Astor post, Oakland, and from the posts at Palo Alto and San Jose are expected in large numbers.

Regimental and divisional societies are to have registration booths where they can locate stray buddies, is one of the features of the affair. Commanders Frank Storey, F. E. Carlson, Thomas Church, and Frank White head various committees, with Oscar Rosendorf, commander of General Jacob Smith post, as chairman of the arrangements committee.

Entertainment galore is promised by the committee in charge of the affair and music will be furnished by Treloar's Silver V. F. W. orchestra, all members of Musicians' Union, Local No. 6.

NOVEL COURSES BEING GIVEN BY HIGH SCHOOLS

Schools have progressed a long way from the old conception of an education which consisted of "reading, 'riting and 'rithmetic." Many of our high schools are now offering courses in modern trades which fit the student to enter some industry immediately upon his completion of the school, according to the Bureau of Education.

A number of high schools, for example, report that they are giving courses in aviation. Typical of these is the Joliet, Illinois, Township high school, which now offers a course in aeronautics in which the theory of flying is stressed. Instruction relative to airplane engines is given in connection with the fourth-year work in auto mechanics.

Owing to the demand for service men in the radio industry, the vocational education board of Essex County, N. J., made a survey of the radio manufacturing industries in the country, and on the basis of this information organized specific courses in the trade schools of the county to train for production and service in the radio industry.

A course in stagecraft in which the students learn to construct scenery, do painting and decorating, and electric wiring for illumination is offered by the Santa Barbara, Cal., high school.

A course in foundry practive in cooperation with a large harvester company is offered by the high school of Stockton, Cal. The instruction is carried on in the factory of the company by an expert foreman. Students for this course are carefully selected with reference to their aptitude and interest for the work.

A program including courses in power plant engineering, laundry work and linotype work has been developed by the Union high school, Fort Bragg, Cal.

The Frank Wiggins Trade School, Los Angeles, offers a janitors' engineering course covering heating, lighting and ventilating from the standpoint of a janitor's responsibilities.

Predictions that a proposed tourist playground in Panama will be a great success appears to be well founded. Attractions will include a race track, unrestricted gambling of all kinds, and an unlimited supply of fancy wines and liquors.

The Desert Moon Mystery

by KAY CLEAVER STRAHAN

© by Doubleday Doran Co., Inc. WNU Service

SYNOPSIS

Sam Stanley, wealthy owner of the Desert Moon ranch, informs his housekeeper, Mary Magin, who tells the story, that his former wife's twin daughters, Danielle and Gabrielle, are coming to the ranch to live, their mother being dead and their father, Daniel Canneziano, who had been the cause of Sam's divorcing his wife, in the penitentiary. Sam has adopted a boy, John, now grown to manhood, and a girl, Martha, twenty-one, physically healthy but weak-minded. Mrs. Ollie Ricker, Martha's nurse, lives with them. Hubert Hand, a wanderer, and Chadwick Caufield, John's wartime buddy, are the other members of the household.

Until after he came, I had not realized how little real laughing any of us had done. We had been happy enough, and content; but we had never been much amused. He amused us. He made us laugh. He took the mechanical player off the old grand piano, and played it as we had never before heard it played. He spoke pieces and sang funny songs until we held our sides with laughing. He was a ventriloquist, and a mimic besides. He could imitate all of our voices to a T.

Martha adored him. He played with her by the hour. He made two dolls, Mike and Pat, for her, and he would let them sit on her knees while he made them talk for her.

At the end of November, when he began to talk about leaving, Sam offered him a hundred and fifty a month to stay on. He said, like Hubert Hand had said, "What for?"

"For living," Sam said.

Chad laughed and shook his head.

"Double it, then," Sam urged. "I wouldn't have you leave the place, and Martha, for three hundred a month; so why shouldn't I pay it to have you stay?"

Chad never would take any regular money from Sam. But he stayed on. He called himself the "Perpetual Guest—P. G." for short, but some of the others said it stood for "Pollyanna Gush" and called him "Polly" to twit him. Pollyanna may not be literature, I don't know; but a person of that nature is most uncommonly pleasant to have around the house.

The girls got here on Friday, the eighth of May. Sam and I rode down to Rattail in the sedan to meet them, and John took the small truck down to bring up their baggage.

I don't know what there is about riding in a train that turns folks haughty and supercilious; but there is something that does. A person who would be right hearty and human on his own two feet, sits in a car window and looks out at the platform people as if they were something he wanted to be careful not to step on. By the time I had passed fifty or more windows, and had reached where the girls were standing, I was so heated up I couldn't find a word to say but, "Pleased to meet you," which was not the truth.

One of them smiled real sweet, and said, "Mary! Upon my soul you haven't changed at all in sixteen years," and made as if to kiss me; which I did at once.

The other one gave me a jerky nod, and stood there, watching the train pull out, until Sam, who had been poking along behind me, managed to catch up.

"Uncle Sam," she exclaimed, laughing and standing on tiptoe, and putting her hands on his shoulders, and tipping her pointed chin up to him, "you dear, to have us! I had always remembered that you were the biggest man in the world, and now I see that I was right about it."

Sam didn't kiss her, as she had expected him to. He patted her hands, took them down off his shoulders and held them a minute before he dropped them and reached to shake hands with the twin who had kissed me.

"Well, now," he said, "this is sure great. Little girls all grown up to ladies, and coming to see their old uncle." (He had bitten on that uncle bait, though he was no more their uncle than I was.) "Which of you is which, now? Let's get you sorted out, so I can call you by name. I used to get you all mixed up, when you were little tykes—couldn't tell one from the other."

"You won't have that trouble any more," said the one who had nodded at me. "I am Gabrielle, and that prim little puss is Danielle. People never get confused about us any longer."

The population of Rattail had come running to the depot, of course, when the train stopped; and, at last, swaggering his way among males, females, Indians, cowpunchers, and dogs, here came John.

"La-la!" exclaimed Gabrielle, when she caught sight of him. "Who is this picturesque man thing coming toward us?"

John did look pretty fine, wearing his new corduroy suit, and his shining new leather puttees, and his new sixteen-dollar sombrero. He had even gone so far as to button up the collar of his brown flannel shirt.

"He," Sam answered, beaming with pride, "is my boy, John."

"How thrilling!" chirped Gabrielle. "It is like living in a cinema, isn't it, Danny?" And off she went, sort of skipping along the tracks, to meet him.

When they met, John gave her about the same attention that a passenger gives the ticket chopper at the gate, in a city depot, when he sees the train he is trying to catch moving slowly out through the yards. He pulled off his hat with a bow, but he passed her, walking very fast. I thought that he was so flustered that he did not know what he was doing. He knew. He was headed straight for Danny. He had been in the freight house since long before the train came in, sizing up from a safe distance the girls' arrival. Then he had sneaked out the back way, up past the station house, and around it and back again, to give the appearance of having just that minute got into Rattail.

"John," I said, when he reached Danny and me, and stopped short, like he had just been lassoed from the rear, "this is Danielle Canneziano."

John dropped his hat in the alkali dust, his new hat, and reached out and took both of Danny's hands in his. Falling on his knees in front of her would not have been much showier.

"I—" he produced, "I—I heard you laugh."

To me, it barely made sense; but she seemed to find it interesting and important.

"Really?" she said, and sort of trilled it full of meaning.

Rattail's population was beginning to close in around us. I pulled at John's sleeve; but I declare, if a freight hadn't come along, forcing those two to get off the tracks, they might have been standing there yet, gazing into each other's eyes.

I was halfway home, riding beside Danny in the sedan, when Gabrielle's laughing out again, at some remark of Sam's, made me remember that she had been the only one who had done any laughing when we had met. Danny had only smiled. So, if that laugh was what had put John clear off his head, he had picked the wrong twin.

CHAPTER III

The Secret

The first minute I heard that the Canneziano girls were coming to the Desert Moon, I questioned my self as to what reason any Canneziano ever had for coming to the ranch, or for writing to the ranch. The answer was, to get money. I tried to think that they would stay a few months, long enough to put themselves in Sam's good graces, ask him for a tidy sum, and leave. But they had not been on the place two days before I knew that there was something far less simple, something, probably, treacherous and sinister at the root of this visit of theirs to the Desert Moon.

On the evening of their arrival the girls had unpacked their trunks in their bedrooms. The next morning the boys carried their trunks to the attic. Going through the upper hall, later that same morning, I saw one of the empty drawers that had fitted into their new-fangled trunks, lying beside the door to the attic stairway.

I hate clutter. I picked it up and carried it upstairs. I went in all good faith; but I wear rubber-soled shoes around the house, and the stairs are thickly carpeted; so the girls, who were up there, did not hear me coming. Just before I got to the turn in the stairs, I heard one of them say:

"I am sure that there is no use in searching the house. In the first place, he never could have gotten it into the house without being seen."

"You are too sure of everything, when you are unsure of anything," the other girl answered, and I thought, since the voice was louder and, somehow, richer, that it was Gaby's. "Stop being sure, and try being sensible. We must find it. We have very little time. How do you know whether he could have brought it into the house or not? There is a back stairway."

Fool that I was, I kept right on going up the stairs. It took me a while to develop the poll-prying, eaves-dropping, sneaking, and generally despicable character that I did develop later.

"Did you girls lose something?" I asked.

Danny jumped, from being startled, but Gaby never turned a hair.

"Only a trinket of Dan's," she said. "Possibly she never packed it at all."

I gave them the trunk drawer and came back downstairs, wracking my brain with questions.

Who was the "he" who had, or who had not, gotten something into the house? The something that they must find, and had very little time in which to find it. And, land's alive, what was the something?

I resolved to say nothing, but to watch those two girls, like a hawk, from then on. I did so. But it was three weeks before I heard anything more at all, though I saw a great deal.

It was during these three weeks that Danny and John announced their engagement. My own opinion is that they got themselves engaged the first five minutes they were alone together; but that they had gumption enough to wait for ten days before telling it.

Sam gave them his blessing. That is to say, he said that any agreement they wanted to make was all right with him, if Danny was sure she would be satisfied to live on the Desert Moon, and if they would wait a year to be married. They agreed to this, the year of waiting, reluctantly. The only people who were downright pleased with Sam's decision were Gaby and myself. I, for certain reasons of my own. Gaby, because she was choosing to consider herself also in love with John.

She made no bones about her feelings. I did not do as John did, and set all of her open advances toward him down to sister-in-lawly affection. Still, I didn't believe that she really thought she was in love with John, until I hid in the clothes closet that evening and heard Danny and her talking together.

Gaby's actions, that evening, toward John had been so downright disgusting, sitting on the arm of his chair, and trying to coax him out of the house to see the mountains by moonlight, and hanging herself around his neck when they danced together, and so on, that I had a notion Danny might have a little conversation ready for her when she could get her alone.

I had waited about ten minutes when I heard the door of Gaby's room open. I was so tickled I all but squealed, when I heard that Danny had come in with her, instead of going on down the hall to her own room. Evidently they had begun their conversation in the hall, for Gaby's first words were, "Jealous, my dear Dan?"

"I don't know. But it is silly for you to act as you do. John is in love with me. Why should you try to take him away from me, when you don't want him yourself?"

"Are you sure of that?"

"Yes, I am. His good looks fascinate you, and so does his unsophistication. You'd like the fortune he is to inherit. But you would never be satisfied to marry him and live right here for the remainder of your life."

"No, I would not. I'd marry him, if he didn't have a penny—it is you who are always thinking about his fortune—but I wouldn't allow him to bury himself, and his beauty, and charm in this Godforsaken country. I'd get him out into the world, and have him take his place there. With his ability and energy, and with me to help him, what a place it might be! For you to have him is—waste. Waste. You don't know anything about love. You'll never learn. I—I tell you I can't bear it. It isn't fair—" She began to cry, hollow sounding sobs, that seemed to catch in her throat and wrench free from it.

"I am sorry, Gaby. I love John. He means to me peace, and security, and decent living—the things I want most for my life. Why should I risk it all?"

"Coward! Coward! Peace and security! He means life to me. All of it; full and complete. Love, and passion, and adventure and attainment, for him and for me, too. Do you think I'll stand by, and allow you to have him, to bury his wonder in your peace, and smother his possibilities with your security and decent living?"

"I think," Danny answered, "that you will have to. John and I love each other; and we are going to keep each other. You, nor anyone, can change that."

"Suppose I should tell John why we came here?"

"You won't do that. You can't harm me without harming yourself. But, if you threaten that, just once more, I will go straight to John and tell him the truth—"

"You promised—"

"I haven't broken my promise. I sha'n't, if you don't. But you must know that I haven't any interest left in the thing."

"What about your desire for revenge?"

"That desire was yours, not mine. I never considered that side of it at all."

"Coward! Quitter! Stool-pigeon—"

"That isn't fair, Gaby. I'll help if I can. I have been helping, haven't I? I won't hinder in any way. But the time is short now. Remember that."

"Danny—" There was a new tone in Gaby's voice, sweet like, and appealing. I did not trust it for a minute; but I think Danny did, for she answered, gently, "Yes, dear?"

"Forgive me. Let's be twinny again. Friends?" I could hear the treachery in that as plainly as I could hear the words. I think Danny did not hear it, for she answered, "I do want to be friends Gaby. I do, truly. Only—please, dear, won't you leave my man alone?"

"And you'll help me. And you won't tell him—anything?"

"Of course I won't tell, Gaby. It is really your secret, now; not mine. And I'll help you all I can."

• • • • • • •

Revenge. Out of all that crazy conversation the one word kept pestering me like a leaking faucet. Did people revenge other people, or have revenge on them, or—what? I looked it up in the dictionary. "Malicious injuring in return for an injury or offense received."

I got a piece of paper and wrote it down. "The Canneziano girls want to injure, maliciously, some one on the Desert Moon ranch, in return for an injury or an offense received." I crossed out "The Canneziano girls," and wrote, "Gabrielle Canneziano," since Danny had said that she had never considered that side of it at all. It did not help any. It did not make sense.

Since Sam and I were the only people on the ranch they had known before they came here this time, it seemed as if they had come to injure, maliciously, one of us. I had never done either of them a mite of harm in my life. Sam had never done anything but good for them. Of course, Sam had not been very gentle with their father. But, as I took pains to discover, neither of them had any kind feelings for their father. Both of them laid their mother's death at Canneziano's door. They thought that his cruelty and his neglect had killed her. It was senseless to suppose that they were harboring a grudge against Sam for anything that he had ever done to Canneziano.

The Desert Moon was like a three-ring circus during the months of May and June. There were the girls, everlastingly searching for something: leaving the house shortly after the men left it, each morning; returning, tired out, just in time for dinner; off again for the afternoon, and coming home just in time to pretty up for supper. After a while, I began to lose interest in that; and, being a woman, I allowed my attention to become distracted by the center ring where all the love interest was going on. Most of my attention I gave to the clown in the ring,—to Chad.

I cannot explain it, now or ever; but Chad, from the very first, was head over heels in love with Gaby. He had no more chance of winning her, penniless, funny, kind little fellow that he was, than an amateur has of riding an outlaw pony.

She never gave him two looks. He couldn't even make her laugh with his jokes and his songs, as he could the rest of us. But he followed her about, and waited on her. He brought her pony up to the house, instead of allowing one of the outfit to do it. He brought her desert flowers, which she tossed away to wither. And Martha was half mad with jealousy.

Right at first, I think that some of the others thought that Martha's jealousy was something of a joke. I never did think so. Before long we all began to feel that it was more than a little serious. Sam talked to Chad, and to Gaby about it. Chad did the best he could, after that, to be as attentive to Martha as he had been before; but if he so much as opened a door for Gaby, Martha would go into temper fits, and sulking spells.

As for Gaby, Sam's talk with her made things worse. She had never noticed Chad at all, so she had not noticed that Martha was jealous of him. She welcomed the news as another tool she could use to tease and torment the poor girl. All along she had delighted in teasing and tormenting Martha, though she had not dared do it when Sam was present.

One of Gaby's pleasant little ways was to refer to Martha as an idiot, right before her face.

"La-la!" Gaby exclaimed one evening, when Martha was wandering about. "The idiot gets on my nerves. Can't you make her keep still, Mrs. Ricker?"

"She isn't harming anyone," I said, since Mrs. Ricker, as usual, said nothing. "You leave her alone, and stop talking like that, Miss."

"I'm not harming anyone, now," Martha piped up. "But some day I might. I'd like to—I won't, though,"

There Were the Girls, Everlastingly Searching for Something.

she walked over close to Gaby. "If you'll give me the gold monkey, I'll be good then, for always."

It was a bracelet charm of Gaby's, a gold monkey, about the size of a large almond, with jade eyes. The minute Martha had seen it she had begun to beg for it. Gaby would not give it to her; would not so much as allow her to wear it for a few hours at a time. As usual, this evening, she refused to let Martha touch it.

"Yes, and you'll be sorry," Martha threatened.

Just as she had hated Gaby from the start, Martha had loved Danny; but she could not tell them apart. It seemed incredible that even Martha could be confused about the two girls; because, if ever girls were opposites, those girls were. Their faces, just their faces, did look alike. They both had large brown eyes, straight noses, small mouths, pointed chins, and complexions the color of real light caramel frosting. Danny's cheeks showed a faint pink, coming and going. Gaby painted her cheekbones, clear back to her ears, with deep orange-pink color. They both had wavy, dark brown hair, cut just the same in the back, real close fitting and down to a point. But Gaby brushed her hair straight back from her forehead, and put varnish stuff on it till it was as sleek and shining as patent leather. Gaby's clothes were all loud colored, or seemed to be—black turned gaudy when she put it on—and they were all insecure appearing, too defiant of paper patterns to be quite moral. Danny's clothes were as neat and quiet as a pigeon's.

Since Hubert Hand was too selfish ever to love anything that his nose wasn't attached to, his carryings on with Gaby should be classed, I think, not in the center ring, but as the main attraction of the third ring. And he almost old enough to be her father, with white coming into his hair at his temples!

To this day I have never understood those two, during those months. Gaby was in love with John. Hubert Hand was in love with Hubert Hand. Yet they hugged and kissed, and seemed to think that calling it "necking" made it respectable. It wasn't a flirtation, with them. It was more like a fight, where each of them was fighting for something they did not want. A perfectly footless, none too wholesome performance.

Baboon Formidable Foe When Incited to Fury

At night the South African baboon is a timorous creature, and as its sight in the dusk is far inferior to that of the leopard, the latter sometimes steals up to where the troop is sleeping, makes its pounce, and escapes with a shrieking victim. But the leopard does not invariably have the best of it. There are several well-authenticated instances of such a night marauder being surrounded and torn to pieces. Another enemy much dreaded by baboons inhabiting the warmer localities is the rock-python. But there are instances of even the python being destroyed by the combined fury of a troop. All snakes, whether poisonous or not, are equally feared by baboons. This is somewhat strange in view of the circumstances that the latter can at once distinguish between berries that are wholesome and those that are poisonous, even though they may never have seen them before. The hiss of a snake will reduce the most enraged baboon to a state of abject terror, and a dead snake placed in the vicinity of one will drive it almost distracted.

The Right Way to Redye Fine Silks

Textile makers always use special dyes for silk or wool. They know that is the best way. The makers of Diamond Dyes are the first to enable home dyers to follow this plan.

Next time you want to dye some of your more valuable articles of silk or wool, try the special Diamond Dyes in the Blue Package. They will give these materials clearer, more brilliant colors than any "all-purpose" dye. And they are just as easy to use as ordinary dyes. Like the white package Diamond Dyes, these dyes contain an abundance of the highest quality anilines. The blue package dyes silk or wool only; the white package dyes, or tints, any material. Either package; 15c, drugstores.

Find Treasures of Art in Buried Syrian City

Rich archeological discoveries have been made by the French mission which, under the command of M. Shaffer, of the Strasburg Prehistoric museum, is excavating ancient deposits at Minet-el-Baida and Ras Shamma, in Syria. The most important of these finds is the unearthing at Ras Shamma of a number of baked clay tiles bearing cuneiform inscriptions, which are believed to be about 4,000 years old and to have constituted part of a great library.

A buried city which is now being explored on the same site has yielded among other treasures a gigantic granite bust, apparently of Egyptian origin, and bronze objects engraved with cuneiform characters, which their discoverers claim are the best preserved in existence. Finds of almost equal importance have been made at Minet-el-Baida, 4,000 years old.

Around these tombs were tables bearing offerings to the dead, numerous Egyptian statuettes in bronze enriched with precious stones, a golden diadem, necklace, and numerous pieces of fine pottery.

Unusual

J. J. Hassett, secretary to the park commission, while making an inspection tour, was asked for alms by a man loafing in the Plaza and engaged him in conversation. After the chap had told his glib tale of woe Mr. Hassett remarked:

"I suppose you have a wife and children somewhere, haven't you?"

"No," confessed the man, "I haven't a wife. I never had one."

"Well, good gracious!" exclaimed the astonished Hassett, "what made you so poor, then?"—Los Angeles Times.

LIGHT'S GOLDEN JUBILEE TO BE WIDELY CELEBRATED

Light's Golden Jubilee—October 21—will find California joining the rest of the nation in glowing tribute to Thomas Alva Edison, who fifty years ago ushered in the age of light with his invention of the incandescent electric lamp. Governor C. C. Young will lead the state in salute to Edison, and at his suggestion city officials, chambers of commerce, civic organizations, service clubs and the citizenry in general will make October 21 a day of homage.

San Francisco's celebration is being arranged by the Junior Chamber of Commerce, with William Cathcart heading a special committee. The committee urges tribute through generous illumination of office buildings and homes. Special flood-lighting has been arranged for the Telephone building, the P. G. & E. building, the City Hall and other structures featuring the skyline.

"THE DRAKE CASE" COMES TO THE MARION DAVIES THEATRE

A picture that is vastly different from the run of murder trial courtroom scenes in "The Drake Case," at the Marion Davies Theatre, San Francisco. This is made possible by its unique story and unusual treatment. While the entire story is practically enacted through testimony of witnesses, the picture has been handled so that it stands alone among films of its kind. The audience of the theatre becomes the audience in the courtroom, listening to a trial that is marked with melodrama os well as humor. It treats of a woman accused of murder on almost irrefutable grounds who refuses to say one word to aid her defense although she protests her innocence and in the same breath says she is glad that the murder victim was slain.

GOLD DIGGERS OF BROADWAY AT THE EMBASSY THEATRE

Heralded as an all color pageant of song, "Gold Diggers of Broadway," the picture that has made such an impression on New York audiences, begins an engagement at the Embassy Theatre, San Francisco. Not only is this picture all in natural colors but there are a number of song hits sung by stars of the musical comedy stage. Most important of all is the appearance of Winnie Lightner, the season hit of Broadway, who is the central figure of this picture. The picture is really a musical revue, at least in its background. It is a story of back stage, and the main theme carries a central romance and two of minor importance, so there is really a triple love story running through the picture.

A noiseless motor has been invented, but in some neighborhoods a noiseless radio would be even more popular.

LIVESTOCK SHOW WILL BE HELD IN SOUTH CITY

Seven hundred head of choice fat hogs of the various breeds of swine, Poland Chinas, Duroc Jerseys, and Hampshires, are certain to attract unusual attention at the second annual California Livestock and Baby Beef show to be held at the Union Stockyards, South San Francisco, November 9-13, according to E. W. Stephens, manager of the show.

The most prominent swine breeders in California have for some time been preparing their selections of prize porkers for the November show and the keenest rivalry is expected between the various breeds for the championship honors.

The show will open Saturday, November 9, at the Union Stockyards, South San Francisco, and will continue through Wednesday, November 13. No admission is charged.

DISCUSS COUNTY WATER PROBLEM

serious water scarcity in San Mateo county. The Hetch Hetchy-Spring Valley water supply is within our grasp. In order to take advantage of its use, we must supply an agency to receive, distribute and wholesale the water to the thirty or more independent distributors. The unified and economical method is by use of a distribution system to be built and operated by the people of the district affected, that is to say, by the San Mateo county water district.

So far, we have only dealt with our present predicament. What of the future?

In a recent study of the population growth of San Mateo count, Mr. M. J. Bartell, assistant to the City Engineer of San Francisco, Mr. O'Shaughnessy, forecast a population of 430,000 in San Mateo county in 1950. This figure was based on a present population of 82,000 and a consistent ratio of increase in the intervening twenty years. Such an increase will create a demand for 50 million gallons of water daily in excess of the amount being developed locally at the present time. How are we to take care of this increment to the citizenry of our county?

Here in San Mateo county, we have some extraordinary advantages, some of which are:

1. Immediate proximity to the center of population of the Pacific Coast.

2. Unexcelled climatic conditions which put to shame more widely advertised localities of the state.

3. An exquisite landscape of natural beauty, timbered mountains, wooded hillsides, picturesque homes; a residential community with assets of incomparable value.

4. A bay shore of flat open country with tremendous industrial possibilities, served by highway and rail and with deep water bordering it that is part of one of the greatest harbors of the world.

Certainly these advantages, well know to all of you, constitute a fertility of resource that could hardly be surpassed.

To develop them properly is our earnest wish. To do so without an abundant supply of good water is out of the question.

Our future as a community depends substantially upon the integrity of our water supply. May I repeat that this is San Mateo county's most acute problem, and that I believe that the answer is to be found in the formation of a San Mateo county water district.

M. J. Bartell, an assistant engineer of San Francisco, then spoke on the necessity of an adequate water supply, giving figures and estimates of the increase of population and amount of water needed for supply.

J. E. A. Miller was the next speaker, speaking on the general needs of an increased water supply.

E. B. Hinman, M. J. Bartell and J. E. A. Miller are three members of a large committee of the San Mateo water district.

Others that spoke favorably on the subject were Mayor H. H. Smith, Councilmen H. Sundermann, A. J. Bodien, T. Moran, and A. J. Dalton, John J. Fahey, president of the local Merchants' Association, and Attorney W. H. Clay, secretary of the Merchants' Association.

An invitation was then extended to any one in the meeting to ask questions of the engineer. A number were asked and answered, after which a motion was made to endorse the proposition of forming the San Mateo County Water District, which was unanimously carried.

BRITONS AND OLYMPICS

Whether it expresses British sentiment or not, the London Daily Express opposes further participation by Britons in the Olympic games, next to be held in the United States in 1932. It suggests in stead an Olympiad in which only England and the British dominions would participate.

It is to be hoped that the suggestion of the Express will not be adopted. While there may have been cause for some dissatisfaction at times, there is no doubt that the Olympic games have on the whole made for a better understanding among the competing nations.

The English have not been outstanding in any of the previous contests, but it is not in keeping with their sporting spirit to sulk on that account. The recent astounding seaplane speed records attained by English aviators are a vindication of the empire's virile sons.

Hubby: "It must have been a little cuckoo."

"Come to me," said I to the barber's daughter, trying to scissor hand. But she cut me short, told me to go towel. Eh, bien! So we parted, and I lather alone from now on."

Have you tried Baldwin Coal? It's sootless.

"I'll pay you $20 a week if you will do all my worrying for me."
"All right. When do I get paid?"
"That's the first thing you have to worry about."

We stock wire netting and screen.

Kind-hearted Lady: "Have you forgotten that I gave you piece of pie, just yesterday?"
Tramp (at the back door): "No, ma'am, I have not forgotten, but I have forgiven."

Lady of the House: "Will you have a chair?"
The Collector: "No, thanks; I came for the radio set."

Goes farther! Lasts longer! "Bass-Heuter" Paints.

There is nothing that broadens one like travel, unless it is too many hot fudge sundaes.

Won't you phone us for your next supply of Coal—the kind that will assure you high, uniform, clean heat at all times? Thank you!
